ArmsCollecting.com will continue publishing "Research Reports" with the type of articles published by our "hard copy" predecessor. It is not possible at this point to predict how long an article will remain on the site but it is hoped to add new material at least every three or four months. If you have something to get out to arms collectors and historians, it can be sent to our E-mail address (mrsarms@kos.net) for review by our editors and advisors.

AN INDEX OF BRITISH GUN LOCK MAKERS

J.E. & S.J. Gooding

INTRODUCTION

All gunmakers who went through a seven year apprenticeship under a skilled gunmaker would have been sufficiently skilled to make gun locks of quality, perhaps even equal to the best. But economies of production made it more economical for many gunmakers to turn the majority of the production over to those who specialized in the area.

There is little documentation, but it does exist, that even the top line gunmakers used lock makers outside of their own factory to produce their locks, leaving only hardening as required and decoration to complement their skill.

Some of those "outsourced" locks, perhaps many of them, would have been marked internally by their true makers in a way which might be identified. But first, there must be a data base which can be used to lead to a source which will help to identify them. This note is designed to provide an index which might perhaps help.

Contemporary documentation has shown that gunlock makers in the County of Staffordshire provided a large percentage of the locks required by the Western World – the military locks required in Britain by the Ordnance and the gunmakers in Belgium, the trade gun locks required for North America and Africa, and the sportsmen's locks required in America.

For information on an individual, each of the entries in this index should be checked. Most sources have given various addresses to provide a clue to dating, a distinction which will not be shown by the entries here.

Some, perhaps many, but not all, gunlock makers left their full name or initials stamped on the interior of their locks. It is hoped that this "Checklist of Tradesmen" will identify some of them and provide a source for further study of the gun lock makers of at least parts of Great Britain.

THE SOURCES

B&N01 English Gunmakers The Birmingham and Provincial Gun Trade in the 18th and 19th Century by De Witt Bailey and Douglas A. Nie, Arms & Armour Press, London, 1978. This title covering the years up to 1900, records many thousand individuals and companies in the gun trade. The listings appear in three chapters. The first, recording those working in Birmingham, has been given the designation B&N01.

B&N02 This designation covers the provincial gun lock makers recorded in the second chapter of the above title where they are listed in alphabetical order by the village, town, or city. The third chapter provides an alphabetical listing of these same workmen designed for ease of searching. In addition, one chapter and one appendix is included on the evolution of the gun trade, especially in Birmingham, and there are four appendices of statistical data.

DWB01 British Board of Ordnance Small Arms Contractors 1689-1840 by De Witt Bailey, W.S. Curtis Publishers, N. Wales, UK, 1999. This title records the contracts issued by the Board of Ordnance during the flint period, and the contractors employed to produce each component.

HLB01 A Dictionary of London Gunmakers, 1350-1850 by Howard L. Blackmore. Christie Phaedon, 1986. Published in America as Gunmakers on London 1350-1850, George Shumway Publisher, York, PA. This, the product of more than 30 years of research, is the standard work on the London gun trade.

HLB02 Gunmakers of London Supplement 1350-1850 by Howard L. Blackmore. Museum Restoration Service, Bloomfield, Ontario, 1999. Like the above title, this updates the information located by Mr. Blackmore in the same style and format as his Dictionary.

JEG01 The London Gun Trade 1850-1920, a checklist of tradesmen by Joyce E. Gooding and Peter A. Scott-Edeson. Historical Arms Series No. 41, Museum Restoration Service, Bloomfield, Ontario, 2001. A record compiled from the London directories published annually by W. Kelly & Co. which took over publication of the London Post Office Directory in 1840.

MAN01 Gun and Gun Part Makers of Staffordshire by Michael A. Newland (2nd Revised Edition). Staffordshire Muzzle Loading Association, 1999. An annotated study in alphabetical order containing names and biography of workers in the gun trades. It was compiled by the author while curator of arms as the Birmingham Museum of Science.

SGC 03 PCC Wills, National Archives, Public Record Office, Kew, Surrey (revised to 27 Sept/03). Compiled by Stan G. Cook from apprentice details found in Inland Tax (Stamp Duty) Records.

SGC11 Gun Lock Maker & Apprentices: a list compiled by Stan G. Cook from the apprentice records of the London Gunmakers Company, 1802-1900 now housed in the Guildhall Library, London. This carries forward the London Apprentices Vol. 8 Gunmakers' Company 1656-1800 incorporated into HLB01.

INDEX GL MAKERS-ALPHA. 19 January, 2004

If a name is followed by "to," it indicates the name was apprenticed to the tradesman whose name follows. For a few apprentices, their age (in brackets) was available, along with the age they would complete their apprenticeship. A surname followed by an oblique stroke "/" followed by another surname indicates a father/stepfather relationship.
